A REPUBLICAN CLUB CONVENTION. elegates from all the Leading Organiza

When President James P. Foster of the Republican Club of New York made an afterdinner speech to the Americus Club of Pittsburgh last April, the idea occurred to him that it would be a good thing to have a Convention it would be a good thing to have a convention of all the leading Republican clubs in the United States. When he returned he explained the idea to his fellow clubmen and found that they thought it would be a good thing. In ac-June to the leading Republican clubs of the country, of which the following are extracts: The Republican Club of the city of New York recently The Bequite the undersigned, its 'Committee on Associate Organizations,' to open a correspondence with the Kepublican elubs of the country, is order to ascertain it the general sentiment in these organizations would favor holding a national convention, to be composed of delegates from these clubs.

The primary object of holding this Convention is to consider the propriety of organizing, in the various states of the Union, a large number of Republican Clubs, and to determine the best manner of conducting the work of the confidence of the Calon.

To this letter answers have already been re-ecived from 150 clubs extending as far South as Chattanoosa and in the North from Maine to Washington Territory. Many of the clubs have already sent in the names of their dele-gates to Secretary Henry Gleason of the Republican Club. Other clubs yet to hear from should swell the number of delegates to over thousand if each club sends its full quota.

No objection to holding the club Convention no objection to nothing the club convention in New York has been made by any club. Though no time has yet been fixed, some day in October is ilkely to be selected. It is proposed to hold the Convention in a large building like the Academy of Music, that full provision may be made for a large audience. After the Convention a banqueut, may be given, which is expected to be as famous as the celebrated banquet of the club held on Lincoln's birthday last spring. There will be a difference between this and the ordinary banquet in that an effort will be made to sceare a hall for the banquet with accommodations for the public, so that the after-dinner speakers will address not only the newspaper men and each other, but the public at large.

This club Convention will be the start of a movement to gather all the Republican clubs in the country into a national organization. Several States, Ohio especially, have good State organizations of their Republican clubs, and it is proposed to join these and have a national club organization which will extend itself into States where the club organization is now imperiectly known. At the Convention it will be urized by the speakers that the duty of the clubs is to supply the social element in clubs and to make the Republican party attractive to young med.

President Foster said, that no candidates clubs is to supply the social element in clubs and to make the Republican party attractive to young meg.

President Foster said that no candidates would be nominated by the Convention, as the clubs had no intention of trying to supplant the primaries or party organizations. They would be a link between the machine and the people. The clubs could declare principles which would have an effect on Conventions as being the authorized utterances of organized bodies of educated Republicans. Speakers would address the Convention, and they might have a certain effect on the courses of organized bodies of educated Republicans. Speakers would address the Convention, and they might have a certain effect on the courses of ortain Presidential candidates, but the clubs would make no formal declaration.

The itepublican club of New York, which inaugurated the club movement, has been in existence several years, and has a club house of its own a few doors off Brown's chop house, but its numbers so increased that it felt warranted in changing its name from the Young Men's Republican Club to the Republican Club, in raising its dues and initiation fee, and in starting out in its own house. Its success has warranted its venture. It now has several hundred members, embracing some of the best known Republicans of New York, and its treasury is in good condition. The initiation fee is $25 and the dues $25 a year, enough to run the club on sound business principles. There are in addition the usual club receipts from the restaurant and bar. It is the intention of the members to make the club a sort of junior Union League, with fresher blood and more political vigor than the told club.

The officers at present are; James P. Foster, President; M. C. Addoms. William Brookfield, and J. K. Cilley, Vice-Presidents; W. M. K. Olectt and O. B. Humphrey, Secretaries; and A. B. Price, Treasurer. Besides the usual club committees, there are Committees on National Affairs and on State and Municipai Organizations. The State Committee makes occasional v Affairs and on State and Municipal Organiza-tions. The State Committee makes occasional visits to Albany during the session of the Legislature to explain the position of the club on important bills. With the club Convention the club expects its power and membership to increase.

THE INDIAN SEVERALTY LAW.

Fifteen Agencies Where the First Steps in Carrying it Out are to be Made.

Washington, July 9 .- The Indian Office has selected twelve agencies where the first steps in carrying out the General Severalty law, passed by the last Congress, are to be made. In a few days the President will issue a general executive order setting the law in operation, and special agents will be selected to go to the agencies and take charge of the work. The local agent, the special agent, and the head men of the tribe are expected to act in concert in selecting good lands, and the Government surveyors will be directed to make surveys wherever the best arable lands can be had for the Indians. The agencies where work is to be done are the Warm Springs, Siletz, and Grands Bonde in Oregon; the Yankton, Sisseton, leade in Oregon; the Yankton, Sisseton, Leaf's Lake, and Ponca in Dakota; the Crow, Leaf's Lake, and Ponca in Dakota; the Crow, Leaf and the Pottawatomie, Muckleshot, Congaw, and Wyandotte in Indian Territory.

Condideration was had chiefly in making up this list for the progress already attained in civilization. For a time the Klowas of Indian Territory were regarded eligible, but it was finally decided to wait another year. Allothents of land have been made on some of these reservations, but to no great extent. The indian of land have been made on some of these reservations, but to no great extent. The indian of land have been made on some of these reservations, but to no great extent. The indian indian indian and the beath of greaters and head drasses, yet there are sai frame houses on their reservation and 3,000 acres of farming land. The Siletz and Great Roade houses on their reservation and 3,000 acres of farming land. The Siletz and Great Roade noise of them read and write. The Quapaws include 91 Modoes, a remnant of Capt, Jack's band, 79 Eastern Shawnees, and 241 Senceas. The Poncas, who are to have larges set off for them, are a portlon of the tribe that, with Standing Bear, their Chief, were removed to the indian Territory, where they readly diminished in numbers in the warn climate. They now live on the running water about thirty miles northwest of the bands agency. The latter tribe is one that will not used to have lands allotted having, under the Influence of missionary teaching, become thoroughly divilized. Their normal school is sought by white students living near thom as one of the best academies in the West.

The most important selection for allottment is the Crow reservation in Montana. It embraces a vast tract of grazing land which the indians do not use and on which there is no game. At the same time it is much needed by the cattle heads of the Territory. The Crows are 759 farms already, and last year dug an irrigating ditch that cost $50,000. Berll's Lake, and Ponca in Dakota; the Crow

TWO LITTLE MAIDS FROM CHINA. Mott Street's Secluded Girls with Cramped

Among the children who have been brought to the attention of the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty are two Chinese girls. It was claimed that they had been kidnapped in San Francisco two years ago, and were held here for the purpose of seiling them as wives to resident celestials. The charge was not proven, and for the present, at least, the case has been abandoned. The girls were a novelty here. As in other places, the Chinese do not permit their wives or daughters to be seen on the street. There are several Chinese women in this city, and when it has happened that they have been brought into court, or into the presence of people with a missionary spirit, they have said that they had not been out of the house before for months, sometimes for more than a year, and in one well authenticated case it was a little over two years since a female resident of Mott street, had set her foot outside her tenement. It was not quite so bad in the cases of the girls, but for weeks at a time it has been the habit of their guardians to keep them shut up at home. The home is near the head of the habit of their guardians to keep them shut up at home. The home is near the head of Mott street, in a four-story building devoted partly to trade and manufacture. Cigars are made on the first floor, and there is a store there also. Up stairs is another eommercial establishment, and in the top stories are tenements. The rooms are, of course, small and ill fitted for habitation. In that respect the heathen little ones are as well off as thousands of their Christian fellow beings of the east side. One of them is dressed in the American fashion, and but for the odd waddle that passes for her gait would not be taken for a Chinese at a distance. The other wears her native costume. It consists first in a blouse that hangs from the neck to the knees, not belted or caught in any way at the waist. Loose trousers are over the legs and bound at the bottoms closely around the ankles. The shoes are thick-soled, wooden affairs familiar as the foot coverings of common laundrymen, but they are excessively small, and bear witness to the cramping of the feet customary with the Chinese. Both blouse and trousers are of a pale blue color, unadorned with figures. It is the ordinary costume of the Chinese of the poorer class. The sliny black hair of the girl, dressed like an American, was brushed straight back from the brow, and wound into a great knot at the back of the head. The other dressed her hair in the native style. Over each ear was a flat, thin circular disk of hair that looked as if it might have been made of artificial hair, and stuck to the head. The other dressed her hair in the native style. Over each ear was a flat, thin circular position. So little hair is used in these disks that enough is left for a large coil, which is fastened at the top and back of the head. Nother of these girls, one 10 and the other 12 years old, could speak a word of English.

SENT BACK TO BREAKABEEN.

Raymond Collins, an English immigrant, arrived here five years ago and went to Breakabeen, Schoharie county, where he obtained work with a farmer. He joined the Lutheran Church, and the congregation set him up in the fruit and fish business. He then took up his residence with Justice of the Peace Zeh. Zeh had a pretty daughter married to Edgar Pat-terson, who lived near her father. Maddie, the daughter, often visited her father, and be-came acquainted with Collins.

It was not long before Patterson accused Collins of alienating his wife's affections, but Collins of alienating his wife's affections, but Collins so stoutly asserted his innocence that Patterson let the matter drop. Then Collins threatened Patterson with a lawsuit. Patterson gave him $175 to stop proceedings, and Collins promised to see Maddle no more. A few weeks later, however, he eloped with her. They came to this city and sailed for Liverpool, where he told her his rich relatives lived, and that he would take her on a tour round the world. They landed there on the 17th of last February, and remained there until three weeks ago, when they again sailed for this country. On their arrival, under the pretence of getting money and seeing her two children, he allowed Maddle to go home. On arriving there she sought her father and husband, and begged to be taken back. The husband consented, and then got a warrant issued against Collins on an old charge of assault. Collins was arrested yesterday in a West street hotel. At the Tombs he was sent back to Breakabeen.

SATURDAY, July 9. the same character that has been noted for a day or two past. The trading element was inclined to depress prices at the opening, and succeeded for a time in doing so. They were most successful in Lackawanna, which lost 14 B cent. during the first hour, but recovered more than two-thirds of the decline before the close. The drive at this stock had only a sympathetic effect upon the rest of the list. and as the prospects were clearly for a favorable bank statement, the traders were disposed to cover short contracts rather than in-crease their lines. decline seems to have encouraged unusually bold and extensive operations on the short side. The public as well as a good many professional dealers are holding aloof from the market, owing to its unsettled condition and the feeling of nervousness that has been created by the events of the last two weeks. Efforts have been made to agaravate the feeling of uneasiness, but without much success. So far as can be learned the street is thoroughly solvent and sound. Nothing has occurred to indicate that this is not the case. The only weak spot appears to be among the people who have become involved in the much-talked-of Baltimore and Ohio deal. Considering the circumstances in which they have been placed, they have shown greater staying powers than any one had given them credit for. The only explanation of this is that some larger interest or interests find it useful to keep their heads barely above water. The best information obtainable is that the market finges upon negotiations looking to the transfer and distribution of the Baltimore and Ohio cutift, and also that it is likely to be accomplished in the near future and in a manner that will benefit a number of important interests.

The trade reports for the week are a little more encouraging. There is an unexpected increase in the volume of business, particularly in the West and Southwest. The number of commercial failures is unusually small, and seems to be decreasing. Lust week the number reported was 141, against 135 during the corresponding period of last year. The coal trade is in exceptionally good condition, and in iron a somewhat firmer tone is noted. Haliroad earnings keep up remarkably well, and they seem to furnish the best support to the market. The Inter-State Commerce bill is ceasing to be as threatening a factor as it was, and the railroad companies generally are following the course indicated by the Commission, namely, exercisins their own judgment in determining how far to ignore the long and short haul clause provisions of the law.
